

Merry Christmas! Here's what's going on with us in Chiang Mai.

Birthdays. So. Many. Birthdays. Since the last newsletter, Joel, Nathan, Isaac, and Cindy all had birthdays, and Lu is due to have one in just a couple of weeks. So all the boys are 8 now (except for Joel who's 9), and we are that much closer to a house full of teenagers.

Oi.

A fair. In the community where most of the kids go to school, a fair came to town for a bit. I have no idea why, but it was a fun opportunity for the kids to enjoy a carousel, a bounce slide, and the world's sketchiest ferris wheel.

They also got to learn the eternal frustration of impossible (and probably rigged) carnival games. Fortunately, we found one game that guaranteed everyone a toy.

Prayer Requests

- Lu's relationship with everyone, but especially Adam.
- Lu's citizenship and Asia's adoption. We still have nothing.
- Asia's eyes. A doctor said they might be able to help with her vision, but we're waiting for confirmation. Pray!
